Day 1	Unit 1: Role Models and Festivals Lesson 1	➤ describe daily household chores ➤ complete a summary ➤ practice the correct pronunciation of –ed verb endings ➤ study the theme of Role Models ➤ study the sub-theme of Incidents from the life of Hazrat Muhammad (PBUH)	textbook, writing board	Introduction: Read aloud the title of Lesson 1, to focus the students’ minds on the theme of a simple life. Ask the students for examples of the household chores that Hazrat Muhammad used to do. Give them time to think of activities, and write these on the board, correcting spelling as you do this. Methodology: Read the text aloud, emphasizing the important words, while students follow in their books. 4. Then let them tick the things which they did not know before. Briefly ask individual students to tell the class about the parts which told them something new. This is an opportunity to correct and model good pronunciation of some words and phrases in the text. Ex B: The teacher will read the sentences, the students will listen carefully and will choose the best words to complete the summary. Ex C: The teacher will read all the verbs ending with –ed and let the students identify the sounds like: Sounds like /d/: used, lived, repaired Sounds like /t/ : milked, helped Sounds like /id/ : mended, visited Wrap up: Wrap up the lesson by asking the students to retell the incidents mentioned in the text in their own words.
Day 2	Unit 1: Role Models and Festivals Lesson 2	➤ read a debate about Independence Day celebrations ➤ take part in a parallel debate, mentioning different activities ➤ practise the conventions and dynamics of oral interactions in a group ➤ study the theme of Patriotism and National Pride - study	textbook, writing board, worksheet	Introduction: Start with an informal chat about Independence Day Celebrations. Brainstorm with the class for a maximum of five minutes, asking for example, ‘What kind of activities do schoolchildren do for Independence Day?’ Methodology: Write their ideas on the board in note form. Standardize the spelling as you do this. Keep the notes on the board, as they will be useful for Exercise C and D. Read aloud the rubric and check that the children are ready. They must have a pencil in their hand and tick the activities while you read the dialogue aloud. Read the dialogue aloud with lots of emphasis and lively intonation. 6. At the end of this phase, ask the class for examples of the activities which they ticked. Ex B: Divide the class into groups of four and assign roles. The groups read their dialogues aloud. Ex C: Group Work: To help the groups practice a different debate with different activities, it’s a help to list cue phrases on the board in order. Then, the students can adapt their dialogue as they proceed from the start of the dialogue to the end. Write these phrases on the board:

		the sub-theme of Love for Pakistan		- put up national flags - decorate the school bus - carry the school flag and banners - organise a school art exhibition - practise marching in straight lines After the groups have had the opportunity to practise, get one or two groups to act their dialogue in front of the class. Ex D: A lot depends in this freer discussion whether Independence Day is in the recent past, or is in the near future, or is at another time of year. Ask the question, ‘Which other activities have you seen in the streets and squares of your home town? Which of those activities would you like to do, if you could?’ Make a list of these extra activities in note form. Wrap up: cuss the activities the students do personally on Independence Day and which activities they would like to do in future. Homework: The students will do the worksheet in homework.
Day 3	Unit 1: Role Models and Festivals Lesson 3	➤ read a realistic story about physical differences ➤ predict what will happen next in a narrative ➤ discuss the topic of bullying ➤ study the theme of Peaceful Co-existence study and discuss the sub-theme of Making friends	textbook, writing board	Introduction: Ask the students to look carefully at the artwork. Ask: ➤ Can you see any physical differences between the children? ➤ Are all the children active during the lesson? ➤ Do they look happy? Methodology: Ex A: Read aloud the rubric; check the meaning of ‘similar’ (opposite of ‘different’). Read aloud the story with plenty of expressions. Get answers to the two comprehension questions. Ex B: Do not read Part 2 of the story yet. Instead, do the ‘Prediction’ and ‘Discussion’ phases. Read aloud the rubric and the four possible continuations of the story. Discuss the situation. Invite the class to respond to the questions. Do not hurry them – allow them plenty of time to voice their own ideas. There are no right or wrong answers Ex C: Read aloud the rubric and all the questions 1-4. Discuss the four questions with the whole class one by one. Invite the class to reply to the questions. Do not hurry them – allow them plenty of time to voice their own ideas. There are no right or wrong answers. Wrap up: Wrap up the lesson by asking the students to share what they have learnt from the story. Homework: The students will do the worksheet in homework.

Day 4	Unit 1: Role Models and Festivals Lesson 4	➤ read a recountal (a realistic story) ➤ discuss and predict the next events in a narrative ➤ understand the use of technology in railway safety ➤ study the theme of Role Models ➤ study the sub-theme of Heroic deeds depicting courage	textbook, writing board	Introduction: Make full use of both artworks to establish the context before the children start to read. Ask general and specific questions, e.g. ‘In which country does the story take place? (Pakistan) Does the story take place in daytime or night-time? (night-time) Can you see something on the railway line? Is it there by accident or on purpose?’ Methodology: Ex A: Read aloud the introductory paragraph. Check that the class understand the following: What is a medal? Who got the medal? Why? Read the rest of the text in Ex.
