He hasn't come back yet. 2. I have been filming birds. I've just got back. Ex A: Pair work: Divide the students in pairs and give each picture to each pair. You should be able to change the tone of this sentence by switching out the punctuation. Some great examples include: I have a hat. I like ice cream. Next, change the full stop at the end of the sentence to a question mark. Ask students to share their thoughts on how the question mark changes the meaning of the sentence. Then, change the question mark into an exclamation mark. Again, ask your students how this changes the meaning of the sentence. Explain to the students that the meaning of a sentence is determined by the type of sentence format used to write it. Tell them that they will be learning about the four different types of sentences today. Ask the class for volunteers to list the different types of sentences giving examples. Methodology: Name the four types of sentences: statement sentence: 'interrogative sentences, imperative sentences and exclamatory sentence'. Explain these four types to the students also tell them that how to punctuate these types of sentences. Let Us Understand: Read each sentence and let the students guess which type of sentence it is. Take their responses. Make sure each student takes part in this oral practice. Practice Ex A: Tell the students that to make questions for the statement, we usually use the helping verb in the beginning of the sentence and we use question mark instead of full stop. For example: I have misplaced the pen you gave me (statement) Have I misplaced the pen you gave me?(question) Write the sentences on the board and ask students one by one to make the questions for the statements. Make sure the students know the difference between main verb and helping verb. Wrap up: Wrap up the lesson by asking the students to share examples of four types of sentences.

(simple sentence) 2. Where are you going? (question) 3. Give me a glass of water, please. (request) 4. Hurrah! We won the match. (exclamatory sentence)

				Methodology: First tell the students that we use exclamatory mark at the end of the exclamatory sentence. Practice Ex B: Make the students sit in pairs and ask them to rewrite the given exclamatory sentences as statements in their notebooks. Give your assistance during the activity. Take their responses and then give your feedback. Ex C: Write questions on the board and ask the students to answer these questions of their own choice.
