Then ask the students to give their reasons, saying, Which phrases in the three texts directed you to the correct title? Point out that there are clear clues in the texts as follows: Text A: (last line) ‘he prayed for mercy’ Text B: (line 4) ‘and would have equal rights’ Text C: (line 3) ‘there is no room for racism in Islam’ Read aloud each of the texts; pause to ask and answer questions, as there is some abstract vocabulary that students may not know or understand, for example: Text A: punishment, guidance, forgave Text B: declared, religion, tribes Text C: delivered Ex B: The students will complete the summary of Text A with the given words in pairs. A horse is not required. Take the opportunity to examine the photo on detail, asking for example, ➤ Point to the riders, how many are there? (two) Point to the ball / the mallet. ➤ How do you carry the mallet when you are about to hit the ball? (with the mallet head pointing down) ➤ How do you carry the mallet when you are not about to hit the ball? (with the mallet head pointing up) Methodology: Ex A: As there is no Audio Recording, read aloud the text clearly and emphatically while the students follow in their books. Ask them to stop you when you read aloud an adjective that describes the sport. Finally, ask students to read aloud paragraph which describes the shots of polo, while you demonstrate them with the hockey stick which you remembered to bring into the classroom.

				Ex B: Read aloud the questions one by one. This is an opportunity to involve the less-talkative students in a class discussion. Give them plenty of time to express their ideas. If a student makes a mistake, do not correct him/her but simply rephrase the answer and ask the student to repeat it. Wrap up: Encourage the students to talk about their favourite sport. Home Work: The students will do the worksheet in homework. Make sure to discuss it in the classroom.

Others may have a realistic or unrealistic idea. Encourage them to tell you. Discourage the other students from laughing or disbelieving; listening with respect is a skill that is worth teaching. Stage 3. Follow the flowchart for yourself It's probably better to do this task in pairs. Also, it's more interesting for the students. Ex B: Ask the students to brainstorm and discuss with their partners to think of other interesting jobs in groups of four and share the list with the class. Wrap up: Wrap up the lesson by discussing the Ex C to be given as homework. Home Work: The students will do Ex C in homework.
