Day 1	Unit1: Where We live now: Reading e-mails	➤ improve reading skills ➤ read and draft an email ➤ learn unfamiliar vocabulary ➤ answer the related questions	textbook, notebook, writing board, flashcards or pictures	Introduction: In the introductory session/lesson. Write “Welcome to English Class” on board. Introduce yourself to the students. Tell them your name and name of the subject you are going to teach them. Introduce the books included in syllabus. Methodology: Development of Reading and Speaking Skills Ask following questions to check prior knowledge of students: 1. Have you ever send any email? 2. How to send an Email? Divide the students into four groups to read emails and then encourage them to explain the emails in their own words. The teacher can show them pictures of the famous places of the cities discussed in the emails. Discuss all the cities and their specialties with the class. Group Work: Vocabulary: Divide the students in three groups and assign three questions (vocabulary) to each group. Ask the students to look for the words asked, describing the sentences in the text. Take their response and then give your feedback. Reading for Understanding: Pair Work: Divide the students into groups and let them discuss the questions. Encourage them to share their answers with the class. Assign questions to the students and let answers be shared Wrap up: Wrap up the lesson by asking the students to share about an e-mail that they might have written recently. Home Work: The students will use the following words in their sentences: famous, restaurant, audience, historical, blossom, fortress, wonderful, landscapes.

Day 2	Unit 1: Expedition Lesson 1: Listen and Speak	➤ learn and practice simple present verb tense ➤ learn and practice compound adjectives ➤ write an email	textbooks, whiteboard, notebooks	Introduction: Individual Description: Initiate the lesson by asking each student to come and write one sentence about herself/himself on the board. Now ask the students to observe that all the sentences are in simple present verb tense. Methodology: The Simple Present Verb Tense: Tell the students that The Simple Present Tense is used when you are describing conditions that have existed for some time. For example: The countryside in England is very green. The yak provides us with food. Tell them that most of the emails are in simple present tense. The simple present tense indicates an action in the present time which is not finished. This can be a habitual action (something done regularly such as brushing your teeth every day) or a general truth. Some examples are: 1) a habitual action: I wash my car every Friday 2) a general truth: The sun rises in the east. Discuss with them by giving more examples; ask them to answer the question given on pg#5. Move around the class to help them to answer the questions. Compound adjectives: Ask any student to read the definition loudly in the class and then discuss it with others. Write some adjective and compound adjective on white board and ask them to differentiate between adjective and compound adjective. Tell them what is compound adjective. Appreciate your students and provide them with your feedback. Make column on white boards. Ask the groups to make compound adjectives and then write them on the board. Use the list and the examples to complete the task given on pg. 6. Move around the class to help them in solving it. Wrap up: Wind up the lesson by asking the students to share at least three sentences on myself using simple present tense. Home Work: The students will do the worksheet in homework. Make sure to discuss it during the lesson.
